Fund manager commentary

2018 started with sharp movements in financial markets with equities pushing higher whilst government bonds and the US dollar moved decisively lower. Strong economic data continued to support risk assets, whilst falling unemployment and the continued normalisation of inflation pushed 2-year bond yields in the US to their highest levels since 2008. In Janet Yellen's last meeting as Chair of the Federal Reserve, she clearly indicated that further rate rises are to be expected in 2018.

Emerging market equities were once again the strongest region globally, buoyed by strong earnings and attractive valuations. Within the region our allocations to Russia and Eastern Europe were the standout winners over the month. Within developed markets, currency movements had a significant impact on returns with US equity market strength almost entirely offset by the drop in the US dollar. Our US dollar currency hedge helped to offset some of this weakness.

Rising government bond yields were a strong headwind to many parts of the fixed income market. In the UK, gilts fell over 2% thereby losing almost two years' worth of income in a single month; a good demonstration of the asymmetry of bonds with such low yields. Over the last few months we have been significantly reducing our exposure to longer dated bonds with the greatest sensitivity to rising bond yields, whilst focusing on short dated investment grade bonds. We have also been increasing our allocation to cash which should allow us to redeploy at more attractive levels.

In a volatile month for global markets, our diversifying assets produced strong risk adjusted returns and demonstrated their low correlation with equities and fixed income markets. The most notable performance came from GAM Star Global Rates fund which was well positioned to benefit from the pronounced moves in fixed income and foreign exchange markets.
